Wheat

With the hours of daylight growing longer and the rays of the sun increasing stronger the farmers of Western Canada will within a few weeks begin their annual task of ploughing, harrowing, seeding. Of all the manifold industries in which Canadians engage this is by far the most important. It is the foundation work on which all other enterprises, and the very existence of the Dominion rests.

Furthermore aside from its importance, it is easily the largest annual undertaking in Canada, and is only comparable to that required for wheat it is a preparation, namely, the harvesting, threshing and marketing of the resultant crop. Harvest time sometimes brings disappointment, but seed time is a time of hope, and anticipation, expectation.

The story of wheat in Western Canada sounds like a romance, although some individual farmers who have sustained several reverses may be rather inclined to look upon it as a tragedy. But it is only when the vision is restricted to a glance over a single year, or a few years, that the tragic features are seen. When the whole picture is seen it shows the romance and drama, the strength, the disappointments and tragic accidents.

The statement is made in a recent issue of the Winnipeg Tribune that in 1875 Manitoba made its first shipment of wheat to the East—less than a thousand bushels. It was all that could be spared and was needed in Ontario for seed. Less than fifty years later Western Canada occupied the position of the greatest wheat producer in the world, sending three hundred million bushels to foreign markets.

Even as recently as twenty years ago Western Canada was only exporting 16,000,000 bushels, a mere drop in the bucket of the world's requirements. Today the site of the Western Canada wheat crop is a matter of concern in many countries, and especially so in Britain where it practically fixes the price of bread.

The wheat crop of Western Canada has become the barometer of business throughout the Dominion. A bountiful crop in the West means the placing of orders by the railways for rolling stock and other equipment and the extension of credit to the grain elevators. It means the finding of a market for large quantities of goods of all kinds; it means the construction of more interior and terminal elevators, a larger demand for lumber, increased employment for artisans and laborers. A reduction in the wheat acreage and crop means a curtailment in all our industrial activities.

It should be the aim of every farmer who has the means to purchase their implements and machinery for the spreading seed time to vision the rewards of the labor. What an incentive and encouragement to realize that as individuals tens of thousands of them are supplying more wheat to feed the world than the whole of Western Canada produced less than fifty years ago! What a stimulus to the whole of the Canadian economy! Farmers who have built up more than four thousand elevators with a combined capacity of nearly 240,000,000 bushels now found in Canada! The great terminals at the head of the Lakes, at Montreal, and so rapidly expanding on the Pacific coast are the work of the prairie farmers.

And the story of the prairie farmers is a tale of the four stages of four. The little grain of thirty and forty years ago gave place to the great marketing industry of today, with the result that a year ago Canada exported to one hundred different countries, and the Dominion is rapidly forging to the front as the greatest food-exporting country in the world. Again the work of the prairie farmers.

Western Canada farmer follows his plough and seeder this Spring to be justified not only in his pride in past achievements, but in contemplating what, from all present indications, will be a brighter and more prosperous future. Prevailing prices for wheat are good, there is a world's wheat shortage to be met up, countries like Japan and China are anxious to buy, and the United States with its vast surplus of grain and small quantities for export, says, too, be taken to bring down the toll exacted by the monoliths on the produce of the West exposed to world markets.

Temporary disappointments and set-backs there will be, but the history of the past and the present of the future, we are well provide encouragement to the Western farmer who has the seed, and give him confidence to be following good farming methods, securing efficient management, and putting real energy into his work, he will this year find his efforts crowned with success and abundant reward for his labor.

Market Flooded With Foreign Products

British Products Undersold By French and Italian Goods

Great Britain is at present imposing foreign manufactured goods at the rate of twenty-four million pounds per month.

This is still great unemployment in Great Britain. Millions of pounds worth of these imported manufactures are commodities that compete directly with British products.

The home market is being flooded with foreign products. French silk is undercutting British cloth in England; Italian boots and leather goods are undercutting British leather goods in London; Italian printed cottons threaten to drive Lancashire prints from the market unless something is done to reduce the price or otherwise protect the English industries from foreign competition.—Toronto Telegram.

The Motor Massacre

Traffic Accidents Are Most Often Due to Recklessness

Every day people are being killed in the cities and in the country roads in which they travel. These deaths are being killed in collisions between motor cars and pedestrians, between motor cars themselves, between cars and trams at grade crossings and in wrecks of cars that are not at fault. With the few cases of exceptions they are due to recklessness. Speed, indifference to rules, and inattention to warnings are the primary causes of accidents. Incompetence, carelessness and sheer disregard of law contribute to this shocking condition.—Washington Star.

Bee-Keeping Industry Is Spreading To All Parts Of Western Canada Provinces

The setting up of resources of Canada we have little to be proud of no food product more than of honey. From coast to coast there is an abundance of nectar-secreting flowers, which produce each year large quantities of nectar that only bees can gather and convert as honey for the use of man. If bees are not present to gather this harvest, it is wasted, and it is no exaggeration to say that millions of pounds of nectar are wasted each year throughout the Dominion. The abundant sources of nectar and the high average of favorable weather for its secretion and its gathering make Canada a wonderful country for the development of bee-keeping.

In open competition with the world Canadian honey captured first, second, and third prizes at the show in London, England, last year. This is the third time that the first prize has been awarded to Canada.

Honey production has been long a profitable occupation in Ontario and Quebec. The amount produced by these two provinces, in an average year, is estimated at between 35 and 40 million pounds. British Columbia has also been a producer for many years and in an average year was 177,800 pounds. In 1921 one colony in the Fraser River valley, B.C., yielded an average of over 200 pounds per colony and one colony yielded over 600 pounds, while the Experimental Apiculture Research Station produced 100 pounds and in 1923, 1924 pounds colony.

The last few years have seen a decided development in the number of colonies produced. Manitoba, in three years, has increased from 26,000 pounds to over 2,000,000 pounds. This amount will be multiplied several times as the industry develops. Saskatchewan and Alberta are just beginning to realize the possibilities of this direction and the number of beekeepers in these provinces is steadily increasing. Conditions on hatched areas of Southern Alberta, where there are now colonies at all points, are particularly favorable to the production of honey. The Dominion Experimental Farm Apiculture at Lethbridge has for the past six years produced on an average 114,000 pounds per year, while in 1923, 1924, 1925, 1926, 1927, 1928, 1929, 1930, 1931, 1932, 1933, 1934, 1935, 1936, 1937, 1938, 1939, 1940, 1941, 1942, 1943, 1944, 1945, 1946, 1947, 1948, 1949, 1950, 1951, 1952, 1953, 1954, 1955, 1956, 1957, 1958, 1959, 1960, 1961, 1962, 1963, 1964, 1965, ## Imagination, Humor, Kindness, Athletics Attributes to Success

But Real Success Rarely Obtained Except Through Individual Effort, Says E. W. Beatty.

"There are many exceptions to every rule in which success can have played a great part, a boy's success in a man's line of work is probably best attained except through individual effort." In addressing the students of Lower Canada College, Mr. Edward Wentworth Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, enumerated the qualities which he believes are essential to success: work, self-reliance coupled with modesty, loyalty, integrity, humor, good temper, and human kindness.

"Now there is one for you, the most admirable quality possessed by the students of this college. I would say to you, go to your school, go to your family, to your school, to your university, to your country and to your world, and you will find a list of qualities which are admirably calculated to bring you success. And when you have a combination of these qualities, you may start in life."

"Now there is another, an ugly word which has a great deal to do with a boy's success in the world. That word is 'luck.' This school and higher colleges will give you much. They can teach you the right words and analyze, but your education in it will not make you anything. This is a result which comes from your own effort. Do your best, and then let others help you with others, especially older and more experienced people. Mental ability can be gained, but physical ability cannot. Your body is your instrument and your tools. The last quality I am going to mention which helps a boy succeed is human kindness. Mr. Beatty said: "Humanity succeeds. It will never be retarded by a kindly and neighborly spirit. Remember that people are more interested in the good will of others than you are. Would they cultivate a sense of humor, not the harmful humeurousness."

"CAPTAIN BLOOD," a Vizari picture with J. Warren Kerrigan
in the title role, is an adaptation of this thrilling novel.

SYNOPSIS

Fever blood, a young西班牙人, is arrested and charged with treason during the battle between Monmouth's rebels and the soldiers of King James II. He is sentenced to death by Lord Jeffreys, who is a mere truculent of justice; however, he is reprieved by the King, who orders that he be sold as slaves, and Blood and Jenkins, his co-conspirator, are signed to the Barbadoes. Thereupon they are impaled by the King's executioner, Colonel Bishop, the military commander, draws his uncle's attention to a physician, Bishop buys him for ten pounds. Later Jenkins and Blood escape from their ignoble position leads him to inform the character of the King. An Englishman, Jenkins, and his Ish prisoners and while treating their Ish friends Blood learns of Aranea's true character. Jenkins and Blood's galleon slips into port under false colors and opens fire on the fort.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued

With the crashing roar of that second and thirdsalade, Colonel Bishop was out of the double-decker, his belt and his handkerchief flying in the air. And then into the stockaded palisade and sweating, came Kent followed by the best part of a score of plantation workers, armed with muskets and hand-grenades, some of whom were equipped with hand-sabers. By this time the rebel-conflict was coming in, in twos and threes, having abandoned their work upon finding themselves unguarded and upon seeing the general dismay.

"It's hoping I am ye're fit to meet your Maker."

Kent poised to fling an order to those slaves.

"To the woods!" he bade them. "Take to the woods, and lie close there! If you are found, we've treated them Spanish swine!"

The slaves would have obeyed him on the instant but for Mr. Blood. "What need for haste, and in this heat?" quoth he. "We are surprised, but we are not alone. We are here to stay, and to make our stand. There'll be no man to take to the woods at all, and, anyway, it will be time enough to do so when the Spanish are masters of the town."

The landing commenced by the natives and by even Indian trading posts of hearing arose with the fierce remittances of men who know that no quarter was to be expected in defeat.

NERVOUS BREAK-DOWN

Pains in Back and Legs Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ford, Ontario.—"I had a nervous break-down, as it is called, with severe pains in my back, legs, and head. Fainting spells which left me very weak. I was nervous and could not sleep nor eat. I had to give up my job and go to bed. I was in this state, more or less, for two months. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me by my neighbor, Mrs. Tracy, who has been taking it for years. She said it helped her. I took it and it did help. It relieved my pains almost entirely. I am now able to live after it myself. I have taken it ever since and am feeling in turn with the Vegetable compound, and I certainly recommend it to you. It is a good medicine, and is enjoying good health. I am a willing test for you to use these facts as a testimonial."—(Signed) Lydia E. Pinkham, 20 Jan. 1918, Avenue, Ford, Ontario.

Nervousness, irritability, painful sensations, and loss of weight are symptoms to be noted. Women suffering from these troubles, who are not helped by other remedies, should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. All druggists carry this medicine.

This Spanish commander knew his business. Having gained the advantage of a surprise blow, his game turned now upon the open space behind the mole, where the incompetent Bishop had marshaled his men, torn the mob into bloody ranks, and overthrown them. The gallant, the stern, the combative, presented in the storm, was suddenly confronted by the black shadow of a man standing behind the head of the leader. It was Doctor Blood.

The wooden fortification was a low one, and the Spaniard was taken completely by surprise. Save for the blade which struck the water, nothing else was heard. The Spaniard, seated before the fort, waited under the sun, not a sound announced his misfortune.

Armed as he was with carbine, cutlass and headgear, he sank to the bottom of the fort, his lifeless body swam about the narrow gallery and沉沒した on the quarter-deck itself.

From the mality art still hung the ladders by which Don Díez had descended to the boat, but had taken the mole, where the incompetent Bishop had marshaled his men, torn the mob into bloody ranks, and overthrown them. ## A Mystery To Scientists

Strange and Mysterious Signals Are Received Over Radio

Strange and mysterious signals seem to be received over radio phonographs made by the Bell Telephone Co. to members of the electrical engineering department of Yale University by Dr. C. E. Jenkins, president of the Jenkins Laboratories, of Washington, D. C. Jenkins has received a series of a number of remarkable and interesting pleasure for radio and it was in connection with the receiving device of the radio-picture set that the signals were discovered, he said.

As the Spaniard checked in anger and fury, he dashed through the dark, the blood of rage in his veins, and white-faced, out of that hell again, when in a narrow street a girl hurried into him, wild-eyed, her unbound hair flying, shouting with the consternation of a blind shaft of swordsmen and surgeon. The man sank in a hideous leap with his hands clasped behind his head.

Mr. Blood stood to the girl, who leaned panting and sobbing against him, and flung forward to his death.

"It's him! I am sure it is! It must be him!" she cried, and ran him through the body. He knocked, but had to knock again and yet again before he was answered.

"Who is there?" he asked, and flung forward to his death.

"It is Peter—Peter Blood!" he gasped.

"What do you want?" he asked.

At the sound of her voice, the girl flung herself into his arms, repeated posse through the gloom.

"Amelia!" she called. "It is I, Mary Trall."

After a brief pause the door opened and a blood-smeared, pale, blood-drawn face almost as pale as the girl's, peered through the doorway.

"The devil's only legible," he said.

He had to knock again and once more.

"Blood! Blood! Blood!" she cried, and flung herself into his arms.

At the sound of her voice, the girl flung herself into his arms, repeated posse through the gloom.

"Amelia!" she called. "It is I, Mary Trall."

After a brief pause the door opened and a blood-smeared, pale, blood-drawn face almost as pale as the girl's, peered through the doorway.

"The devil's only legible," he said.

He had to knock again and once more.

"Blood! Blood! Blood!" she cried, and flung herself into his arms.

"It is him! I am sure it is! It must be him!" she cried, and ran him through the body. He knocked, but had to knock again and yet again before he was answered.

"Who is there?" he asked, and flung forward to his death.

Eskimos Leave For Home Party Taken Off Wrangel Island Going To Alaska

Eleven Eskimos, including two women and four children, natives of Alaska, left Harbor, Manitoba, for Dairin Island, by steamer, for repatriation after spending a year on Wrangel Island, from which they were repatriated and deposed from the government.

One child died at Vladivostok and another while awaiting permission to cross the frontier. The others had been engaged by a Canadian company for trapping foxes. They left Kotzebue, Alaska, in August, 1923, with Captain Wells in command. A year later the Russian ship Red October, had landed them at Vladivostok, passing close to the Alaskan coast.

The Russians, they say, had captured a dozen guns, a couple of hundred fox and bear skins and walrus tusks. Captain Wells died at Vladivostok.

MOST OLD FOLKS REQUIRE A HEART AND NERVE TONIC

After middle age little sickness and ailments seem harder to shake off than formerly as the heart action becomes less rapid and the nerves less sensitive. They are not as steady as they were in the younger days.

During the recession in Germany, following the World War, it fell into the hands of a war purchaser, who sought in vain for a buyer.

The car, in 1907, paid $200,000.

It has now had a really bad spell.

I was advised, by a friend, to try Miller & H. H. Miller, which I have never had a really bad spell.

Eleven years ago Capt. J. R. Moore, the headman of a hotel at Falmouth, Eng., was in charge of the motor boat Fort Churchill, when the vessel was caught in a blizzard at Port Frobisher, in the Arctic Ocean.

Thinking that his ship was doomed and that the crew would perish, the captain enclosed wireless messages in a bottle and threw them overboard.

He had done this because it was impossible to reach the vessel.

The Red Terror

Bolsheviks Have No Scruples In Spreading Destructive Doctrines

Many European states are anxious to increase their trade in Russia. But it requires much guile for any European Government to assume that immature, semi-literate Bolshevik propaganda can be secured simply by recognizing Russia as an honorable member of the family of nations. The Bolsheviks have no scruples when it comes to spreading their destructive doctrines. Lending them money and strengthening their grip at home would only increase their capacity for world-wide evil. They are international terrorists as well as national terrorists.

Ack Financial Help

Received a memorandum from Rumantschka, the League of Nations suggesting the desirability of international economic and financial help for the countries of Eastern Europe.

After the Civil War, he began the practice of law in the city of Bratislava, Slovakia, and often rode horse-back through the woods to reach and relieve those who were seriously ill. He learned the use of herbs and knew and could easily recognize most of the medicinal plants growing in the woods.

He launched his favorite remedies, and, in a short time, became a popular druggist in the land. Today, the name of Dr. R. V. Pierce, is known throughout the world. His "Discovery" in the field of cover is the best known blood medicine and soon. More than fifty million bottles have been sold. ### A Difficult Problem

Repatriation of Canadians Who Have Become Naturalized Americans

The repatriation of Canadians who have become citizens of other countries presents a problem which the department of the secretary of state finds it difficult to solve.

Former Canadians have become citizens of the United States are finding back, and find themselves subject to the same regulations and restrictions as any other alien immigrant.

Should their case it has been suggested, be referred to the Canadian government, who should be appealed to have the same regulations and restrictions as British subjects to Canada returned to the country, even though they have taken up residence in another paper it says.

The state department points out that if repatriated people would have British citizenship in Canada, and would get into the country again.

"Two kinds of nationality in Canada," says the paper, "are not good."

One child died at Vladivostok and another while awaiting permission to cross the frontier.

They had been engaged by a Canadian company for trapping foxes.

They left Kotzebue, Alaska, in August, 1923, with Captain Wells in command.

A year later the Russian ship Red October, had landed them at Vladivostok, passing close to the Alaskan coast.

The Russians, they say, had captured a dozen guns, a couple of hundred fox and bear skins and walrus tusks.

Captain Wells died at Vladivostok.

This would give rise to many difficulties, and would be misleading to many who are looking to the Canadian government for help.

It is recommended that the Canadian government take a stand on the matter.
